Our WhatsApp community

A little space to stay connected between our Envoy gatherings - to notice, wonder, share, encourage and sometimes simply say hello. This is an extension of our community, not another thing to keep up with.

What this space is for

- Sharing an observation, a question, a small discovery or an encouragement from everyday life.
- Keeping in touch about our gatherings and practical arrangements.
- Offering prayer or support gently, without pressure to share or respond.

How we look after one another

- Treasure, don’t measure. We are companions rather than critics. Different experiences and perspectives are welcome.
- You choose what to share. Nobody needs to explain a quiet week, reply immediately or be available all the time.
- Treat personal stories as belonging to the person who shared them. Don’t forward messages, screenshots, names, photographs or stories beyond this group without clear permission.
- Remember that WhatsApp members can see one another’s phone numbers and profile information, according to their privacy settings.
- Keep conversations respectful. Avoid campaigning, advertising, unsolicited private messages or adding anyone else without agreement.

Some conversations need a different space

WhatsApp is not the place to investigate a safeguarding concern, seek urgent help or work through someone else’s private story. If something troubles you, speak to your Host or use the separate safeguarding contact they provide. If the concern involves your Host, use that alternative contact directly. In immediate danger, contact emergency services.

Our hope: this group makes room for friendship and ordinary life. You are free to mute notifications, step away for a while or leave the chat. Please let the Host know privately if you would like help with that.

Your Host will explain who to contact about safeguarding and how long the group will remain open.
